Precision Learning Program

Build your team's MongoDB skills with right-sized training plans tailored for every learner.
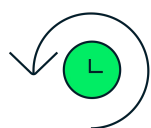

Drive MongoDB proficiency without sacrificing employee productivity. Precision Learning Programs are white-glove MongoDB training initiatives that provide your learners with individualized paths based on their role, MongoDB experience, and project needs.

With tailored training, your engineers quickly get the skills they need to be confident with MongoDB and successful with their upcoming MongoDB projects and professional development.

Individualized training

We use questionnaires and assessments to create unique, data-driven learning paths for each person in your learning program.

Minimize time away from projects

Targeted learning events mean your engineers learn the skills that are relevant to them, and their new skills get applied to projects faster.

Applied learning environment

Hands-on labs and workshops combined with project coaching from MongoDB consultants reinforce training through practical experience.

How a Precision Learning Program works

Analyze the team

- We conduct interviews with learners to identify their current projects, processes, tool sets, KPIs, and challenges.

- We then run pre-assessments to understand skill strengths and gaps and create individual learning plans.

- Plans include targeted learning events including instructor-led classes, technical workshops, self-paced exercises, videos, and more.

- As needed, learners participate in project coaching from Professional Services.

Review training effectiveness

- At the end of training, we conduct assessments, surveys, and exit interviews to measure skill improvements.

- We develop detailed Precision Learning Program reports and presentations for managers and learning sponsors.
